First Annual 3 Catfish Tournament a Big Catch for Zavalla

by The Zavalla Eagle Staff

The 1st Annual Woodsman's Scholarship Fund 3 Catfish Tournament made waves on Sam Rayburn Lake April 11–13, 2025, drawing 14 competitive teams, community supporters, and a whole lot of East Texas pride.

Organized by Jamie Dykes of Zavalla, the event honored the memory of Richard "Man" Babb and David Howard, both Zavalla High School graduates, through two newly created scholarships: The "Man" and The "Circle H."

"We had a great turnout," Dykes said. "Thanks to all the fishermen and women, and everyone who came out to support us—we're proud to give two big scholarships this year."

The tournament featured strong showings, including the all-female team Catfish Cuties, but it was the Mud Cats team, who swept the competition with a 1st Place Stringer – $2,375, Big Blue – $700, Big Op – $700, plus a free entry into the David Holland Neches River Catfish Tournament. Not to be outdone, Whopper Stoppers snagged the $700 Big Channel Cat prize.

With calm waters, fierce competition, and heartfelt purpose, the event was more than just a fishing tournament—it was a celebration of community, memory, and opportunity. Organizers are already looking ahead to next year's tournament, aiming to grow the event and its impact. As Zavalla rallies behind local efforts to support students and spark tourism, the tournament stands as another proud example of the Heart of the Lake in action.

Reclaiming Zavalla's Future: A Case for Tourism-Driven Revival

by The Zavalla Eagle Staff

Once sustained by the timber industry and the hardworking spirit of East Texas, Zavalla, like many small towns across rural America, has felt the sting of economic transition. The sawmills are quiet, the jobs fewer, and the population has slowly declined. Yet, nestled in the heart of the Pineywoods at the Heart of Lake Sam Rayburn and surrounded by natural beauty, Zavalla holds something more valuable than industry: the potential to become a thriving destination for tourism, recreation, and community-driven economic development. This isn't just wishful thinking—it's a path that many other towns have walked successfully.

The Data is Clear: Tourism Revitalizes Communities

According to the U.S. Economic Development Administration, rural communities that invest in tourism see substantial gains in employment, income, and business development. The USDA has echoed this, noting that rural counties with recreation-based economies experience higher growth rates across the board.

In towns where the mills have closed and the jobs have vanished, tourism has stepped in—not as a replacement, but as a reinvention. Take Lanesboro, Minnesota, for example. Once dependent on agriculture, it now thrives on bike trails, local art, and riverfront festivals. Its Main Street is alive with small businesses and visitors year-round. Or Abingdon, Virginia, which pivoted from railroads to the arts and heritage tourism and now draws in millions in visitor spending.

Zavalla already has what many towns had to build from scratch; natural assets. Lake Sam Rayburn is a nationally known fishing destination. The Angelina National Forest is rich with hiking trails, birdwatching, and pine-covered serenity. What's missing isn't potential—it's promotion and investment.

Tourism Brings Jobs—and Keeps Money Local

Tourism doesn't just bring visitors; it creates jobs. The Small Business Administration reports that rural tourism encourages the growth of small enterprises in food, lodging, outdoor gear, and arts. In Paducah, Kentucky, a former river trade town, local creatives and quilters built a vibrant arts scene that drew national attention—and economic dollars. Zavalla, with its proximity to Lufkin, scenic byways, and easy access to the outdoors, could be the launchpad for a wave of local entrepreneurship.

More than that, tourism puts money directly into city coffers. With proper infrastructure—lodging taxes, local sales taxes, and event permits—Zavalla can build its budget without raising taxes on residents. These revenues can then support beautification projects, parks, or even community events that further draw

Heritage and Nature: Zavalla's Unique Advantage

Unlike urban tourism centers, Zavalla doesn't need to invent an identity. Its character is already here: a small town rooted in forest traditions, family values, and East Texas grit. That's marketable—and it's increasingly in demand. Travelers are seeking authentic, off-the-beaten-path experiences, especially those tied to culture, history, and nature.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation reports that heritage tourists spend more money and stay longer than typical tourists. If Zavalla were to highlight its past—perhaps through a small museum, walking tour, or historical signage—alongside its fishing, trails, and festivals, it would appeal to both heart and wallet.

Zavalla's Opportunity: A Blueprint in Progress

The upcoming 125th Anniversary of Zavalla this June is more than a celebration—it's a chance to launch a new narrative. The "Pineywoods Possum Walk," featuring QR-coded hidden possums on local trails, is exactly the kind of interactive, family-friendly experience that turns heads. Events like this invite repeat visitation, social media buzz, and a sense of playfulness that sets Zavalla apart. This kind of tourism is low-impact, high-reward, and community-oriented. It honors the land and invites others to do the same.

Building the Future Together

Tourism isn't a silver bullet—but it is a powerful tool in Zavalla's economic toolbox. With strategic planning, partnerships with regional and state tourism boards, and a little creative energy, Zavalla can craft a sustainable, vibrant future.

The story of many small towns is one of decline. But Zavalla has the opportunity to write a different ending: one of resilience, revival, and reconnection to its roots. The forests haven't gone anywhere. The lake still shimmers in the sun. All that's missing is a new reason to come—and a community ready to welcome the world.

Choices by Albert Hensarling, Pastor

Life is a constant series of choices and we all make them everyday, some are good and wise, while others are wrong and foolish. We all strive to make the right choices but it's through the bad choices we learn many of life's lessons. In the Bible, found in the Old Testament we see Israel made a lot of choices, to obey and follow God, or to disobey God and not follow God. When they followed God, God blessed, and when they disobeyed they often found themselves in captivity. Today, we because of our sinful nature are disobedient to God and are captives of sin. How often do we hear of and make "New Years" resolutions, turning over a new leaf, and more often than not we fail to. I'm reminded of a verse found in Joshua 24:15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the Gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood , or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell:,but as for me and my house, we serve the Lord. A choice needs to be made, we can't serve self and the devil and still try to serve God. My God is a jealous God and wants full custody not just Sunday visitation. Each choice we make comes with consequences that we have to deal with. Every saved individual has a past, but we don't have to live there anymore. Jesus Christ offers forgiveness and wipes our slate clean. As a Christian we are still going to fail, but God is faithful to forgive and restore if we ask for forgiveness. I'm a sunny that's been Continued on page 4

Zavalla's Easter Events Strengthen Community Bonds

by Honey Casey

An Easter Celebration

On April 19, 2025, the Zavalla ISD Athletic Complex buzzed with joy as four local churches— Solid Rock Baptist, Ozias Missionary Baptist, Zavalla First Baptist, and Sulphur Springs Church—hosted the Zavalla Community Easter Event. The following morning, the community gathered again for a Sunrise Easter Service at Cassels-Boykin Pavilion on Lake Sam Rayburn. These events, blending fun, faith, and fellowship, showcased Zavalla's commitment to rebuilding community ties in an era of growing isolation.

The Easter Event drew families for a day of celebration. Children from infants to fifth graders hunted for eggs, their laughter echoing across the complex. Bounce houses provided endless entertainment, while a 5K color run and other races energized participants of all ages. Free hot dogs, Frito pie, cotton candy, popcorn, and drinks ensured no one went hungry, fostering a sense of shared abundance. Yet, the event's heart lay in its spiritual core. Youth from Solid Rock Baptist presented a moving dramatization of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection, reminding attendees of Easter's deeper meaning. Pastor Joel Hitchcock of Solid Rock offered a prayer and a message on Easter's significance, while Pastor Stephen Forrest of Zavalla First Baptist encouraged attendance at the next day's sunrise service.

Despite overcast skies threatening rain, the Community Sunrise Easter Service on April 20 at 7:30 a.m. saw a strong turnout. Held at the scenic Cassels-Boykin Pavilion, the service united people from Zavalla's churches. The First Baptist Church worship team led uplifting songs, setting tone of worship and celebration. Pastor Joel delivered the invocation and introduced Mr. Standbury from Huntington, who spoke on Mark 16, emphasizing the stone rolled away from Jesus' tomb and the personal "stones" we can overcome through faith. The service closed with more worship led by the First Baptist team, and Pastor Forrest urged everyone to find a home church or attend a service later that day.

These events exemplify how shared experiences can counter the disconnection plaguing modern communities. In the U.S., social isolation is rising—studies show only 20% of people regularly interact with neighbors, down from 30% decades ago. Loneliness, linked to health issues like depression, and declining civic engagement, with local voter turnout often below 20%, highlight the need for communal efforts. Zavalla's Easter gatherings offered a remedy by creating inclusive, low-barrier spaces for connection.

The Easter Event's free food and activities removed economic barriers, ensuring broad participation. The egg hunt and bounce houses engaged children, while the 5K run drew adults, fostering multigenerational bonds. The dramatization and Pastor Joel's message grounded the fun in shared values, reinforcing cultural ties. Similarly, the Sunrise Service's lakeside setting and collective worship created a sacred space for reflection and unity. Mr. Standbury's message resonated universally, encouraging personal growth through faith, while Pastor Forrest's call to join a church emphasized ongoing community involvement.

These gatherings also strengthened trust and collaboration among Zavalla's churches. By pooling resources, Solid Rock, Ozias, Zavalla First Baptist, and Sulphur Springs demonstrated unity, amplifying their impact. The involvement of local leaders like Pastors Joel and Stephen, alongside community members like Mr. Standbury, highlighted the power of grassroots efforts. Such initiatives echo successful models elsewhere, like Ohio towns boosting event attendance by 40% through similar collaborations.

Zavalla's Easter events built community by offering spaces for joy, reflection, and connection. They reminded attendees that, like the stone rolled away in Mark 16, barriers to fellowship can be overcome through shared faith and effort. As Pastor Forrest urged, finding a home church sustains these bonds, ensuring Zavalla remains a place where neighbors know and support one another.

saved by Grace, and I'll sin until I die, but sin bothers me and I truly don't want to continue in my sin, it brings separation from myself and God, and that's not where I want to stay. I want to do what pleases God, and allow Him to guide me in the choices I make. Who are we serving today, God or self? It's our choice. Choose wisely, not only does our choices affect us now, but our choices determine our eternal destiny. After hearing or seeing this message you will make a choice, to either trust in God, or to reject God. What choice are you going to make ??

Zavalla's Journey: From River Roots to Lake Life – and

Toward Renewal

By The Zavalla Eagle Staff

Tucked between towering pines and the waters of Sam Rayburn Reservoir, Zavalla has always been shaped by its surroundings. For much of the 20th century, it was a quiet town sustained by agriculture, timber, and the steady flow of the Angelina River. But after the filling of Sam Rayburn Reservoir in 1966, Zavalla began its transformation into a lake community —one that promised opportunity, growth, and new beginnings.

An ad from The Baytown Sun dated March 28, 1969, offers a nostalgic snapshot of those early days of lake life: Pleasure Point Estate lots for sale at just $395, marketed to weekenders and permanent dwellers seeking piney woods, national forest trails, and tranquil waters. People came—many from Houston, Dallas, and other city centers—drawn to the lake's promise and Zavalla's small-town charm.

Yet, the years that followed brought more than just new faces. Zavalla's Main Street, once lined with bustling businesses, has gradually quieted. Many buildings that were once hives of activity are gone only memories of a more vibrant era. As the south end of the lake, in Jasper County, thrived with development and county support, Zavalla, located mid lake in Angelina County, has struggled to keep pace—receiving far less investment or infrastructure attention from the county leaders.

The arrival of new residents from urban areas also created tension with lifelong locals. Differing visions for the community, land use, and traditions have at times caused division rather than unity. Zavalla found itself caught between its past and its potential, between river roots and lakefront dreams.

Still, hope persists. In recent years, local leaders and residents have begun efforts to reignite Zavalla's tourism economy, drawing on the town's unique location and heritage. Events, nature trails, and heritage projects are helping to rebuild pride and bring visitors back to the area.

As Zavalla celebrates its 125th anniversary, the town looks not just to its past, but to a future rooted in resilience and unity. While the road hasn't been easy, there's a growing sense of purpose among those who call Zavalla home—both lifelong residents and newcomers alike.

Zavalla is reclaiming its identity not just as a lake town, but as a community with history, heart, and hope. As the sign says: Zavalla, Texas – The Heart of the Lake.
